There are now twelve buildings on the campus, and two buildings, the Emergency Hospital and the Medical Building, for advanced students, in Oklahoma City. The woman's building is now under construction. Despite the continuous building going on about the campus, the buildings are crowded, and several new buildings are urgently needed. The usual liberal support of the State is expected to supply this need.

The enrollment of the University for 1921 is over 5,000, with 2,715 enrolled for the spring semester. Twelve hundred freshmen are in the school at present, over one-fourth of the number graduated from accredited high schools last spring. The average increase for the past eight years is 400.

FACTS ABOUT THE UNIVERSITY OF OKLAHOMA.

The University of Oklahoma was organized as a state institution in 1892, with a land grant from the city of Norman, and $10,000. It now represents an investment of almost $7,000,000. The University is supported by funds appropriated from the general revenue of the state and by the income from lands set aside by Congress from the public domain. Appropriations from the last Legislature totaled over a million dollars for buildings and maintenance.

There are now twelve buildings on the campus, and two buildings, the Emergency Hospital and the Medical Building, for advanced students, in Oklahoma City. The woman's building is now under construction. Despite the continuous building going on about the campus, the buildings are crowded, and several new buildings are urgently needed. The usual liberal support of the State is expected to supply this need.

The enrolment of the University for 1921 is over 5,000, with 2,716 enrolled for the spring semester. Twelve hundred freshmen are in the school at present, over one-fourth of the number graduated from accredited high schools last spring. The average increase for the past eight years is 400. The program it gives in towns in Oklahoma and in other states, and through its contests in the annual high school interscholastic meet. Through the School of Journalism, the University was

The University is a member of the Association of Universities and Colleges, and is one of the four universities south of the Mason Dixon line whose entrance requirements are equal to those adopted by the trustees of the Carnegie Foundation. The University was one of the three schools granted chapters of the Phi Beta Kappa at the last Trienium, with fifteen schools petitioning a charter.

The University maintains the usual schools, colleges and departments.

The School of Medicine is rated class "A" by the committee on education of the American Medical Association, placing it with the best medical schools in the country in the worth of its degree.

In the opinion of President Stratton D. Brooks and Dr. Joseph B. Umpleby, head of the geology department, the geology school is the largest and especially in reference to oil geology, the best institution of its kind in the United States. Dr. Brooks says: "I do not believe that there is a better geology school, either in equipment or instruction, to be found anywhere."

The College of Engineering and the School of Law rank high nationally in equipment and instruction. The School of Fine Arts is a real factor in the musical life of the State, through the programs it gives in towns in Oklahoma and in other states, and through its contests in the annual high school interscholastic meet. Through the School of Journalism, the University was awarded the distinction of entertaining the annual convention of Sigma Delta Chi, professional journalistic fraternity, this year, and the installation of Phi Beta Kappa endorses the standards of other departments of the University.

Oklahoma takes interest in all sports, but football, under the leadership of Coach Bennie Owen, is of course of the principal sport. The "Sooners" by winning over Drake University Thanksgiving Day, finished the season with a standing of 1,000, thus winning the Missouri Valley Championship for 1920. This was Oklahoma's first season in the Missouri Valley Conference, playing previously in the Southwestern Conference. The outlook seems good for track and baseball this season, and with the future expansion planned for this branch of school life, the athletic situation at the University has a good foundation for future development.

A unit of infantry and a unit of artillery are maintained at the University, with a total strength of 700. The artillery unit is one of the twenty-two in the United States, has a class "A" rating, and has several 3-inch guns, a howitzer and other equipment. The Armory Building, 110 feet by 300 feet, provides room for storage and offices of the units. The artillery unit maintains a polo team, and polo is becoming a popular sport about the campus.

From the above facts, the future of the University of Oklahoma seems very favorable. Already the University has been mentioned in national educational circles. Likewise, student activities and the organizations are gaining repute over the country.

HISTORY OF UNIVERSITY OF OKLAHOMA BAND.

1903 to 1921.

In the fall of 1903 Fredrick Holmberg, then head of the music department in the University of Oklahoma, and now Dean of the School of Fine Arts, organized a band composed of students, faculty members, and a few town people; out of this band the University of Oklahoma band had its beginning.

The fall of 1904 found Mr. Lloyd B. Curtis, cornet soloist and the leader of the band. Under his leadership the first official band was finally organized and uniformed in Sept., 1905. Mr. Curtis was the official director of the band from 1904 until the fall of 1915, when he resigned his position and Mr. Ansel White took his place. Mr. White was band-master until the fall of 1917, when Professor Oscar J. Lehrer was placed in charge.

During that period of the band's history it suffered many vicissitudes but has managed to come through everything victorious. These early years of its existence, most of the band's work was playing for football games, baseball games, track meets and pep meetings with an occasional concert. Professor Lehrer has since that time been giving annual concerts of the best type, and other concerts for special occasions in addition to playing for games, pep meetings, and on Booster trips to the neighboring Universities and Colleges.

The present band has made several changes from that of S.A.T.C. and R. O. T. C. work to a being concert band. In the fall of 1920, it was planned to use the R. O. T. C. uniforms and be in a sense a military band but owing to so many members not wishing to be under military regulations after serving in such capacity during the World War, that plan was abandoned after a few months and a reorganization took place which has given the Band renewed vigor. A new constitution and by-laws, have been adopted. Thirty-six members constitute the regular Band. These men are chosen by competition by the band-master. An additional twelve to fifteen substitutes fill all vacancies in the regular band when they occur. Attendance is compulsory for anyone to hold his chair.

The concerts which have been given the last few years have met with great success giving due credit to the University of Oklahoma Band.

The University of Oklahoma Band is to be congratulated on being able to have Professor Oscar L. Lehrer as it's director. No one doubts but that the Band has gone over its roughest life and is growing stronger each year in ability to render first class concerts and by putting pep into student activities.

The Oklahoma City Chamber of Commerce is voluntarily taking the band on its Booster trip over Oklahoma, parts of Arkansas, and Kansas, starting the first week in May, 1921.

The late uniform consists of dark shoes; white trousers; red sweaters, bottom, sleeves, and collar trimmed in white; black string tie; white soft shirts and collars; and an oversea's shaped red cap, trimmed in white with "University of Oklahoma Band" written in white on the left side, and the monogram "O. U." on the right side.
